EXTRA

LEGISLATURE

The power of the kingdom resides in the King, the congregation of High Priests representing their own temples, and the clan leaders representing their own clans. Each of them is able to act on their own volition, but ultimately under the rule of the King. Creation of a new clan or temple is a slow process.

CULTURE

The Keugang have strong family structures and venerate their ancestors. They live in harmony with the forest Deuyan and lake Konyan.

They are generally not fond of the outsiders. The outsiders which gain the respect of the Keugang are given a Bu-yon, an amulet used to indicate their higher status. Bu-yon's are linked with the wearers soul and lose their colour when taken off.

HISTORY

MYTHS

THE GONDOLIER

In the forest of Deuyan, beside the shore Lake Konyan, dwelt a solitary hermit. The man, shunned the world of men and found solace in the whistles of winds the trees and the songs of the birds, immersing himself entirely in the life of the forest. One fateful night, as the hermit lay in slumber, a serpent crawled into his humble abode. It coiled beneath his bed and left a mark upon his hand. Yet, so deep was his sleep that he did not wake and he never did. From that moment, his soul left the body but became blind, lost within the forest. Stricken with sorrow, he wandered aimlessly, mourning his fate.

In his lowest moment, Lythial appeared before him and asserted, "As you were blind to the life of men, so too are you now blind, with no one to guide you to me."

Lythial took the hermit to the edge of Lake Konyan and presented him with an oar and a gondola. "From this day forth," Lythial declared, "you shall be the guide for those who seek me. With each full moon, you shall emerge as the Gondolier, leading the souls of the lost and the deceased to their final resting place."

Thus, it became that with every full moon, the Gondolier of Konyan appears on waters of Lake Konyan, ferrying those who have no human guidance to the welcoming arms of Lythial, ensuring no pure soul remains lost in the forest of Deuyan.
